Dealing with complex business ethics issues has become a significant priority in twenty-first century companies in the U.S. and on a global scale. Business ethics is an important part of the education for any student seeking a degree in business and for managers. In fact, managers working with foreign operations may be subjected to many ethical issues that do not arise in domestic business. Norway maintains a strong presence in the U.S. and has an excellent reputation in education and literacy, with a high standing for fairness in trade and immigration relations. Norway offers strong cultural ties to the upper Midwest region and its liberal arts colleges and presents many unique international corporate social responsibility issues that highlight the integration of ethics and responsibility in business decision making. This course will build student's knowledge of various theories, concepts, and practices needed to understand the field of business ethics in the U.S. as well as corporate social responsibility on an international level.
